

WMST students place second in cooking competition

At Stratford University in Baltimore on May 8, a group of five WMST Public Charter High School students placed second in a six-school cooking competition.

Antar Evans served as head chef while Ishante Melson served as sous-chef, with Dana Smith, Carsan Johnson and Chanel Young rounding out the WMST Teen Battle Chef 2012 team. The healthy living program is sponsored at WMST by Healthcorps, with Mr. Brandin L. Bowden serving as Healthcorps Coordinator. The six HealthCorps schools participating in the event were from Delaware, Maryland, and Washington, D.C.

The competition was featured on WTTG, Fox 5 in Washington, D.C., on May 8.
